

A NEW ATMOSPHERE

Streamers of light will fill the visual screen of advanced humanity in the new world— luminous strands of light from a palette of hues that stretch far beyond the ultraviolet and infrared. Banners of blended light will be woven into resplendent patterns containing symbols that unfurl to the soul the meaning of events.

Imagine filaments of light saturated with color and ‘braided’ into designs vaguely resembling braided strands of human hair. Now visualize strands of hair forming ever-changing patterns like cloud formations. The Northern Lights offer important clues.

These streamers of blended light will emanate from all kingdoms and spheres of life, reflecting the whole spectrum of consciousness. Their appearance will range from the dull and inconspicuous to the shimmering and luminescent, from the thinnest filaments of light to enormous light masses; from softly dancing waves to explosions of color charged with energy that pervades the entire sphere of Earth. Constantly shifting displays of swirling forms and shapes will stimulate human creativity in every field, from the healing arts and the visual and performance arts, to the new science and education.

All fields of endeavor, all modes of living and serving, will be galvanized by currents and waves of energy.

Sound, an energy even more primordial than light, will vastly amplify the harmonics of light. The correspondence between color arrays and sound vibrations of similar frequencies fosters a state of sublime consciousness virtually unknown in human experience.

To be immersed in undulating waves of light and rivers of harmonic sound is to enter a blissful state that expands the soul's awareness of the oneness and flow of Life. Direct exposure of the etheric vehicle to such energies will stimulate the processes of transformation.

In the future thought will be conveyed by means that bypass words, such as the transmission of thought-forms or images from one mind to another, or the projection of ideas onto light screens viewed by all who are attracted to them by mutual resonance.

The amplification of thought by images will make human communications less subject to misunderstanding—an advance that will greatly facilitate the work of collaborating and cooperating groups.

Just as the flames of a fire produce billowing smoke that can be seen in the surrounding region on the physical plane, the joy of the soul will appear as billows of resplendent golden energy. Flame-like streamers of golden light will flow from acts of goodwill and altruism, sending magnetic waves of love and joy into the matrix of Earth. As these energies pour into the planet's etheric body, they will enhance the power of the One Soul to irradiate all beings with spiritual light.

We must reiterate, however, that the etheric realm is not a paradise but a subtler plane where fewer hindrances to the flow of higher energies exist. Living in a realm of subtler substance will undoubtedly quicken the expansion of consciousness but does not assure progress on the Path of Return. The determining factor is always free will. There will remain many obstacles to be surmounted, primarily of an emotional and mental nature.

Treading the path that leads to the Kingdom of Souls will continue to be an individual endeavor, though a conducive environment is a powerful aid along with the companionship of resonant groups of souls.

LOVE

The spirit of rebirth will pervade the new Earth as it now pervades the physical world with the arrival of spring and the anticipation of a newborn world. As the first breath of spring fills the air with the fragrance of rebirth, the presence of spiritual love will fill the new planetary atmosphere with the scent of resurrection. A world alive with the spirit of rebirth will inspire humanity to shift its gaze toward the Source of life.

Instead of looking upward, however, the soul will turn inward to the planetary heart center where the presence of divine Love is manifest. This Presence opens the gates of the human heart and reveals the omnipresence of love throughout the universe.

In the past, acquiring knowledge was seen as central to the pursuit of higher truth. When this pursuit is unaccompanied by spiritual love, however, it becomes a tunnel that blocks the light of wisdom.

Mystics know that true understanding lies in the province of the heart where divinity is experienced directly. Yet the path that leads to enlightenment requires the light of mind as well as heart. It is the fusion of these two streams of light that illumines the soul.

The light of understanding is like a flame throwing off sparks of love. As one reviews a given lifetime, many episodes may appear disappointing in terms of personal ambitions and relationships. Yet if one scans a life carefully with the illumining power of mind, it is always possible to discern the love of divinity. The soul can perceive the love that springs from the most terrible pain and loss.

Crises of devastating proportions produce a state of transcendence among those who seek to aid. At such moments, only the soul exists and its love flows unreservedly. When the crisis passes, however, the illusion of separateness tends to reassert itself. In the future that illusion will no longer exist.

BEAUTY

On the plane of duality and relativity, beauty and ugliness lie in the eye of the beholder. From the standpoint of modern physics, the observer exists as s/he impacts the observed. All is relative and subjective on the physical plane. In the world of fashion, human eyes adjust to the transitory glamour of manufactured beauty, although it can often degrade the soul.

Beauty on the etheric plane will be objective and absolute, yet only those who are awake will perceive it. The radiance of beauty will be felt as a charge of shimmering light that electrifies the etheric body of the observer/receiver.

Beauty on the subtler planes is an experience of Divinity. 'Carved' from the substance of light it is seen through the eye of light as a coruscating river of luminosity that ignites the joy of the soul. The impact of beauty on the human soul is like that of goodness and truth: divine expressions emit vibrations that stir the soul and raise the frequencies of the light body.

They will all be abundant in the new world, where the creativity of artists of pure intent will ripple outward through the ethers. Those attuned to higher frequencies will have 'antennae' to receive sounds and visions of sacred vibrations, just as plants and animals are sensitive to vibrations that humans are not, albeit for different purposes.

In the new Earth, Beauty emanating from higher sources will not be stepped down to satisfy popular tastes. It will remain in the band of higher frequencies to be tapped by those of a similar sensitivity and transmitted from soul to soul. For those unable to pick up the vibratory stream it will be invisible and thus the original impulse will not be subject to distortion.

Likewise, in the realm of music, the ability to hear sacred sounds will depend upon the listener's capacity to attune to higher frequencies. Life will exist at many levels along the frequency spectrum within the planetary sphere. At the higher levels, beauty will be a force of transformation.

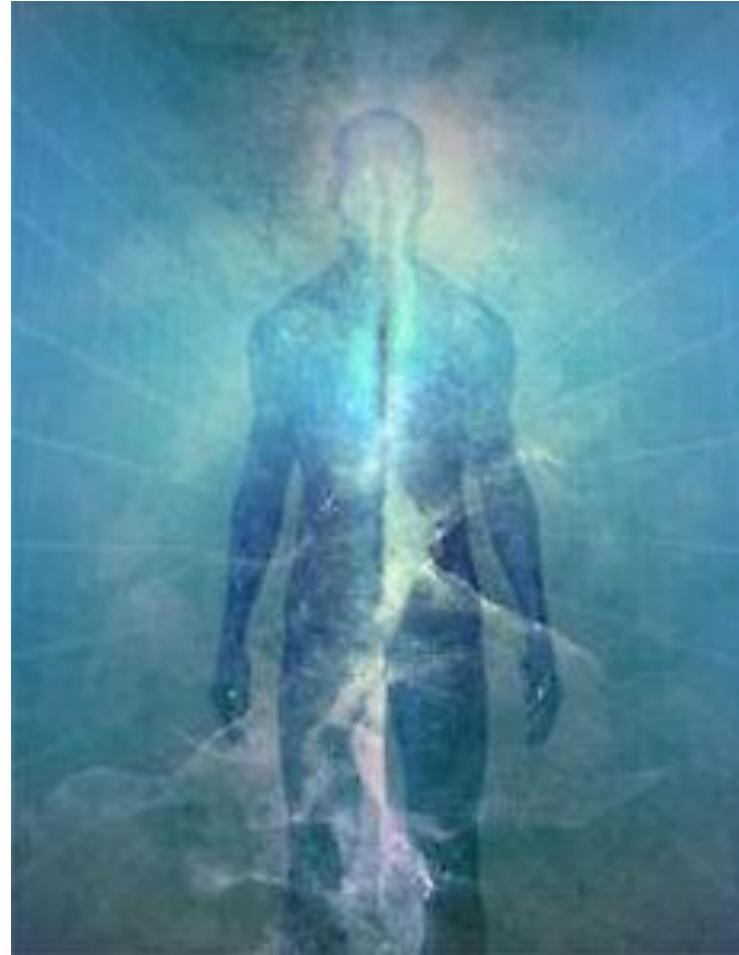

TRANSPARENCY

A striking diversity of forms will reflect a vast spectrum of human, sub-human and superhuman states of consciousness that will co-exist in the new Earth. The transparency of life on the etheric plane will cause considerable adjustments. Motives now hidden by the persona will be visible in the colors and textures of etheric bodies, which will expose a definite tendency toward light or darkness.

Other adjustments will have to be made regarding the visible presence of Divine Forces in human affairs and the revelation that life has a spiritual purpose: the expansion of awareness and closer alignment of the soul with the purposes of the planetary Logos.

In the history of Earth, the aura of invincibility projected by the powerful has served to intimidate those whom they control. In the future the content of auras will be exposed and such power will become a relic of the past.

Motives and intentions will be visible to the etheric eye as emissions of energy. Attempts to coerce other human beings will appear as emissions streaked with black and grey. Shadowy light bodies will betray selfishness, manipulation and deceit, danger signs to those of higher awareness. Seekers of truth will be attracted by the golden light of those who embody love and wisdom.

Transparent light signifies absolute honesty, among the rarest of qualities in today's world. By means of the transparency of auras, humanity will eventually rid itself of deception. The distrust that is currently eating away at the moorings of the physical world will fall away in a lighted world that will encourage trust and openness. New groups and communities will emerge organically from this environment, drawn together by resonance and solidified by mutual trust.
