

BEYOND FEAR
BEYOND DEATH

The human Soul dwells in a realm beyond fear. It is only the fragment of itself projected into the form world for a lifetime that experiences fear. The fear of death, the ultimate human fear, does not exist for the human soul. The triumph over fear in this transition is altering the balance of societies around the globe. It is a triumph of the higher Self over the lower self abiding in form.

It is no longer uncommon to see thousands upon thousands of people risking life and limb, exposing themselves to torture and death, acting under the authority of their own souls for the sake of truth and justice.

The age of fear will end when all that rusts, decays, and dies is left behind. The fear of loss will evaporate with the illusory idea of possession—of a grand estate or a physical form. Light cannot be hoarded or possessed. On the contrary, divine light shines in the visages of all who give themselves and their resources to the work of world salvage. Like fearless warriors, they place themselves in the line of fire, demonstrating what it means to be identified with all living beings. Such souls are supplied from higher reservoirs that never run dry.

Fear has been the driving force in human history until now, hanging over human lives like a Sword of Damocles, triggering unceasing conflicts and wars, relentless cruelty and misery. An all-consuming fear of loss is part of life on the material plane—the loss of loved ones, possessions, health, wealth, occupation, reputation, status, self-worth, and of life itself. That which is of spirit does not fear losing that which belongs to matter.

Were it possible to penetrate the veil and see the future, all fears would instantly dissolve. The problems of humanity will not disappear upon entering the etheric plane, but they will be viewed against a luminous landscape where death does not exist. Life will unfold through cycles of experience yielding ever expanding levels of consciousness until consciousness becomes light itself.

In this new world, light will be inseparable from truth and truth will foster the love that magnetically draws the stream of evolution to itself.

Perhaps the greatest human fear in the future will be exposure to the light of truth -- a vital force with the power to transform a life. The tenor of a person's thoughts will be transparent, appearing as electric charges of greater or lesser light, giving rise to an era of accountability.

The etheric body will no longer be masked by flesh and bones, hidden as it was from human awareness until the ancient teachings of the East made their way to the West. It will be the primary vehicle of the soul in the energy world—a world where death as presently understood has no meaning.

When Earth becomes flooded with light the great illusion of death will be exposed. People will realize that physical death is the start of a process that frees the soul from the trammels of form to assimilate the learning of a lifetime.

As the body's organs fail to function, consciousness withdraws in stages from the plane of human living to subtler planes. The soul withdraws first from the etheric body, then the astral and mental bodies, returning ultimately to a plane where fear is unknown. It is a natural process that occurs largely in the realm of consciousness. For the soul, physical death is freedom from form and rebirth in the boundless world of Spirit.
